

The "great expectations" of the Democrats have been bitterly disappointed in Vermont. Here is what the Boston Post, in imitation of Tilden the Sooth, pugnaciated:

"While a Democratic and Conservative triumph is not positively looked for, the earnest activity of the great Constitutional Party within the State is expected to result in such a large reduction of the Radical strength as will encourage still stronger hopes for the general election in that State in November. And the influence of that reduction, coming from Vermont, will act electrically on the subsequent elections in other States."

"The result in Vermont will establish the fact of the tendency everywhere else."

"Maine will lead the example, and hasten to put it to good use. The response of joy would be immediate and general, echoing and re-echoing across the continent. Vermont leads the way this fall!"

How do you like that electric shock and the tendency Vermont exhibits and the way in which she leads?
